

Monthly Insight Session — Ground-Up to C-Level

Proposal for review · McEasy

Purpose

Give C-Level direct access to what our front-line teams see and know — customer impact, market signals, and process improvements — that dashboards and management layers filter out. It turns the people closest to our customers and operations into a source of decisions, not just execution.

Why now

As we scale, the distance between C-Level and the front line grows. The people who talk to customers, handle support, and run daily operations hold insights we have no reliable way to capture today. This gives them a channel — and gives us better decisions.

How it works

- 1 Open submission (always on). Any employee can submit an insight anytime using the 1-page template below. Written, not presented. Anonymous submission allowed.
- 2 Monthly session (90 min). C-Level reviews the strongest 4–6 submissions and decides on each, live: act / investigate / decline (with reason). Every submission gets an answer — nothing disappears.
- 3 Follow-through (reported next month). Accepted ideas get an owner and a deadline. Each session opens by reporting what happened to last month's insights — shipped, in progress, or declined and why.

What people can submit

Type	Example
Customer Impact	The real story behind the impact we deliver — a win worth repeating or a shortfall worth fixing
Market & competitor	What prospects say in deals we win or lose
Process improvement	Internal friction, waste, or rework worth fixing
Product gap	A recurring customer need our product doesn't meet
Blind spot	A bet or assumption the person believes we've got wrong

Submission template (1 page, 4 fields)

- 1 What I see — the observation, in 2–3 sentences.
- 2 Evidence — what backs it up (customer names, numbers, examples, frequency).
- 3 Why it matters — the impact if we act, or the cost if we don't.
- 4 My recommendation — what I'd do about it.

Type: [Customer Impact / Market / Process / Product / Blind spot] · Name (optional)

How we kick it off

To launch, we personally invite a handful of specific individuals across teams to contribute the first round — people we know have something to say. This ensures the first session has real material instead of an empty inbox, and sets the quality bar. Open submission to everyone follows once the loop is proven.

Recognition — tied to our values

Contributors whose insights drive a decision are named at All-Hands — a direct, visible expression of Take Ownership and Lead and Inspire Others. No cash rewards; recognition and impact are the incentive.

What we'll measure

- Every submission reaches a decision (target: 100%).
- Accepted ideas that ship by the following month.
- Submissions coming from across the company, not the same few voices.

The one rule that makes or breaks it

We must always be able to show what we did with the last round of input. The first time we can't, people stop contributing. Follow-through is the program.

Ask

Approval to pilot for three months, and C-Level commitment to attend each session and act on what surfaces.
